There were so many different threads complimenting the new forums and all the work that went into it... I didn't want to bump them all with "you're welcome", etc... so I'm saying it here.

I spent probably a good 10-12 hours working with the various phpBB files to get it to look like "home", and I'm about 60% done, enough to "go live"... but I know there's a lot more to change. Smilies, avatars, some gaps in the styles, missing/ugly images...

In the next few days, all the little visual glitches should go away, and I'll be re-adding support for the "other features" we need, such as avatars, and my personal favorite, the Member Ranking.

Please stay tuned and be patient with me, and I will get this place in tip-top condition. I'm also evaluating the need for moderators to cover the times Blazer and I have a life, and sleep. I have more offers for moderators than I can possibly fill, and I want the community to select who they want/trust for these few positions (I'm thinking 2-3 to start).

Anyway, those are my few rambling thoughts before I shuffle off to bed. Thanks again for helping make this such a positive rollover.
