

---

Subject: Re: Expelled

Posted by Dave Anderson on Sat, 01 Nov 2008 17:47:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

cheesesoda wrote on Sat, 01 November 2008 10:42I want to see it, though I don't believe Creationism should be taught in schools. It's a ridiculous theory that Christians shouldn't believe in.

It's not really about whether Creationism should be taught in school or not, though that is one of the major sub-subjects of the film. While the theory may seem ridiculous, its no more ridiculous than saying we evolved from primates, or that we might have been "seeded here by another advanced civilization" (a Darwinist's "realistic possibility mind you")

To me, I can't stand people who are closed minded and think they have all the answers. The reality of it is, we know nothing. I believe in God, and I am Christian myself, but I always keep an open mind to opinions from everyone, and you'll never here me say that someone's belief that God does not exist as ridiculous. That would just be closed minded, now wouldn't it?

If people believe in Darwin's Theory, great. If you believe in Creationism, great. But if you think you know the answer, then go jump off a cliff. (None of this is directed at you by the way, just a generalization of the differences in opinions and beliefs that are common among people)

---