Have you been to an allergist?

no but got blood tested and said I have no allergies

I recommend getting a 'pin-prick' test. Basically, stick a bunch of needles into your back, each tipped with an allergen, and a gauge to measure swelling. I know, sounds fun, right? Was well worth it, though. I had no idea I was allergic to a type of fungus that grows in hay-bales, and they were all around our property.

However, there is another possibility. Could be Reactive Airway Disease. A severe flu might have intensified it; even if it was never a problem before. Hope that isn't the case. If it is, it may also be aggravated by chlorine.

Anyone else notice his thread is getting kinda 'House-y?' Bah, sorry. Lost the serious.

Oh, was also told that if you by any chance live in a trailer, might be irritations due to formaldehyde (really?).
