

---

Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?

Posted by Spoony on Thu, 04 Dec 2008 13:40:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

cheesesoda wrote on Wed, 03 December 2008 10:49: That doesn't mean, however, that there are no sane Christians deserving of a vote.

Yes, just as there are some atheists who are quite simply bad people, but there's a big difference between the two. If an atheist is bad it's nothing to do with atheism one way or the other, whereas when a religious person is good (I'm generalising with the Abrahamics here) it's not so much because of their religion as despite it. Like u6795 says, "god or country", the key word being "or". In most of these religious debates I've been involved with lately, I've found myself pointing out that morality and religion are like oil and water; one floats to the top. With the religious people I tend to argue with, it's usually religion at the expense of morality.

You know that saying we keep hearing: "not all Muslims are terrorists, but most terrorists are Muslims". well, it all sounds very enlightened but it isn't. A little more thought into it shows you the fallacy. If you show me a Muslim who isn't a terrorist, it's more a case of them not really being a Muslim.

---