
Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?
Posted by Spoony on Sun, 07 Dec 2008 19:03:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Darkknight wrote really?? please show me where we are supposed to do this Hold on, you said you take Christianity seriously, and you haven't even read the Bible?

pawky wrote on Sun, 07 December 2008 09:35 If you read the Gospels and what Christ taught, it is completely the opposite. (Read story of Christ/the stone throwers/ and adultress woman.) By doing so, Christ basically invalidated stoning since no one is pure and all are worthy of forgiveness. What a pity that this basically means an imperfect society can never punish wrongdoing, then. It also directly contradicts God's endless and very specific instructions.

As for forgiveness, if I sin somehow and the price of my forgiveness is the torture and execution of somebody else (man or a divine being), I'd rather be unforgiven.
