

---

Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?

Posted by Jecht on Mon, 08 Dec 2008 13:16:41 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Sigh, even after telling someone I wouldn't post because I used to put too much time and effort into these forums in the past...here I go again.

It seems to me like many of your fears towards Christianity are misplaced everyone. Many see Christianity as a tool to oppress the masses through their faith and promise of paradise in the afterlife. While some would seek to do this, the whole of Christianity is a very good thing.

I challenge any who would refute what I just said to attend your local large church. I say large church because it will allow you to attend without bringing attention to the congregation that a new person is there, you'll blend in. Attend one service every Sunday for one month with an open mind. My church does much in the way of charity. Not only that, but non-believers are extremely welcome to attend service. The pastors do not look down upon you from their high-horse, and they even admit to their various sins they've committed in their life. In other words, they profess to be just as imperfect as everyone else.

Again, if you've attended for one month with an open mind then at least you've tried to get to know Christianity. If you still don't see eye to eye with it, then hopefully God will change your mind later. While you're on this earth it's never too late to have your name written in the Book of Life.

I believe the Leviticus comment from the previous post by Jake was well explained by pawny. If you'd like to learn more, I'd recommend you read one of the first three books of the new testament for further information regarding Jesus and the Pharisees.

Last but not least, please stop claiming Darkknight is some sort of racist. I've known him for quite a while and we've had an amalgam of different people, from different walks of life amongst us in our old clan we were in together, and he was accepting of all.

As for Barack Obama. While my ideals weren't completely in-line with his(only 42% according to a test I have taken actually(procon.org)), I believe he could very well be a good president.

---