

---

Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?

Posted by cheesesoda on Mon, 08 Dec 2008 15:45:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

America seriously needs a revolution. Jefferson suggested that there should be a revolution every 20 years to rid of any tyrants and to keep the government afraid of the people. Once the people start relying on the state, as we see now, the people have lost all control. Sure, we can "elect" our politicians, but that doesn't actually change anything.

The government and its intervention is the greatest cause of the problems that we have in the economy. I'm absolutely dumbfounded as to how people can even possibly think that the government could be the solution, too.

I hate the fact that our government takes actions to PREVENT deflation. Apparently, they don't want to prevent the continued erosion of our currency. Corporate ties are much more important. This is exactly why government is inherently corrupt. Man in power is corrupt, and government is ran by man.

You may be right that marriage stemmed from religion. I don't, personally, think so, but either way it wasn't Christianity that started it. Christianity cannot legitimately claim ownership of marriage. Ultimately, what I think needs to happen is that the government completely fucks off from marriage. That way churches can deny marriage to whomever they like. If marriage is a religious institution, then government CANNOT have its hand in it. At least, not legally.

---