I find it amusing listening to and reading from atheist. To them there can't possibly be a God so they have to figure out some way to make it all makes sense. They have such a hard time believing in God but have absolutely no problem believing there was nothing then one day all the nothingness banged and everything accidently fell into perfect order, the fish jumped out of the sea, turned into monkeys and one day decided to stand up and talk, boom we have man. That they have no problem believing. To think there is a God who created it all, well that they have a hard time with.

Atheist in a way worship science. They follow science as the end all knowledge of everything. If science has no proof then it cannot possibly be true. Science once believed the earth was flat until it was proven otherwise.

I'm sure Spooky and some others will rip this apart to and show the true hatred they have toward Christians while they say we lack tolerance toward their views.

You can say this about any parent whether they are atheist or religious. Every parent "brainwashes" his or her children into their belief system. When you turn 18 go out and make your own choices.
