

---

Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?

Posted by Jecht on Tue, 09 Dec 2008 11:09:51 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Spoony wrote on Mon, 08 December 2008 20:27 Please specify how secularism "affects" you, at least in ways you see as negative.

There are a number of ways actually, and they take many mediums.

-School, in that I am taught things believed untrue, or not the full truth.

-Television, shows are becoming much more graphic, where some things are...unnecessary.

There is a shock factor that I think some shows try to adhere to. Which is fine, it draws viewers so I can understand why they do it.

-Internet, let's face it, sometimes we come across images we'd rather not have and had no intention of seeing.

-Radio, on stations I listen to, there can often be vulgar things. Luckily the radio came with a dial and a power button when I think it's too much

-Advertising, Ever walk through a mall? Some images there that are...unnecessary to say the least. I'm not at all what you'd call a prude, so I personally am not offended by them. I'm just saying that according to Luke, it's a sin for me to look at them.

-Everywhere, there are various things that test faith. I have to have a strong enough will to overcome them though, for the sake of my savior. Sometimes those are a blessing, especially in the case when the misinformed can be informed.

---