
Subject: Re: Why did you vote for Obama?
Posted by Fabian on Wed, 17 Dec 2008 06:58:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

No, Obama seems a lot more intelligent than McCain. Look at their educational backgrounds. Look where they started off in life, financially.

Obama realizes that people want their guns, but have to respect the ridiculousness of having lax gun laws in cities. I live in Boston and I think it wouldn't make sense for everyone to have easy access to guns. In more rural areas, I insist that people shoot the shit out of animals, cans and targets all they want. And defend themselves. That too. But take that shit out of the inner cities. I really don't see him making gun laws part of his agenda, so this was a non-issue for me.

And don't even start with honesty. McCain and his campaign spokespeople twisted the truth so badly it was sometimes cringe-worthy.

Quote:You cannot deny that at least a large number of voters turned out in favor of Obama because of his skin color.

I mean, I guess. Yeah, blacks and latinos voted in larger numbers, but YOU can't deny that he outperformed Kerry, a white guy in virtually every demographic possible.

<http://www.fivethirtyeight.com/2008/11/obama-outperforms-kerry-among-virtually.html>

The idea that Obama won because felt compelled to vote for a black dude is not supported statistically, and you are just wrong.
