Science ain't all that it's cracked up to be. And if there is no god, then answer me this. Why do you laugh? Laughter is only exhibited in human beings, as a response to the absurd. No other creature even reacts to an absurd situation, there's no gene or chemical response, and no one can locate the cause. Why do some people find some things funny and others not? Why are some people funnier than others? Explain that one if there is no god.
