K9TrooperKIRBY09829, and I play whenever the baby isn't crying, my teenager isn't disobeying, my wife isn't complaining about Renegade, not working 12 hours a day, or the house doesn't need to be worked on. (An hour at night when everyone else is asleep.)

I can relate, except I work 48 hour shifts.

You know what? I want to win the lottery, but only so I can have time back. I just want to be comfortable, and play a bigger role in my kids lives. I don't need all the material things, i just want life to slow down.
