I don't like how some people (ie. way too many) make alcohol out to be this incredible demon that serves no purpose but to destroy lives and families. Not that anybody has done that in this thread... yet.

Certain people should not drink, just like certain people shouldn't own guns, drive cars, procreate, or even have an opinion. It just depends on the person.

I love alcohol, and it's a great escape. I don't need and never have needed alcohol to feel good. It just enhances good feelings, and it can even be used to soften the blow of stressful situations.

What I do hate is that I drank the equivalent of 5 beers last night, chose not to drink any water before I slept, and I woke up to feeling nauseated. I think my tolerance is down from not drinking as much as I used to. Still, drinking water was a quick fix.

Edit: Nauseous --> nauseated.
