@ Caveman:

Congratulations. You know how to physically contradict points that have already been made.

For all I know, you downloaded the HUD with all my arguments already in mind and purposely made sure you acted against what I said. I'm not taking a word you say as factual because you give no proof that you did what you say. I don't even know that you even downloaded the HUD, let alone tried it in an actual server!

However, I said in my last post that you rely heavily on the popups in the middle of the screen, such as the health and ammo. Much less the ammo because it isn't vital to your survival. It's more important to know how much reserve ammo you have left, which is why it is more efficient to glare down at the corner when you are reloading or in a standstill.

However, your Health is something you don't notice. You said yourself you didn't bother downloading the popup addon. So play a few rounds of Renegade on some servers and tell me if you find that you die seemingly faster than you would with the normal HUD. That is the key. Not being able to see something vital to your game.
