Also, reading personal information at a job is a lot different than on a game. The client expects you to keep that information confidential and secure, and legal action can be taken if its not. In a game, this is not the case, so reading private messages is a larger issue.

Did you not read (or completely forget) the part where he mentioned that moderators wouldn't care what you say to someone else in a PM, as long as it isn't harrassing?
