That's one way to look at it. By being selfish, you're being selfless, as long as the deed/intent is good, because we're all inter-connected.

I'm not sure I would go with that for myself. I follow what's essentially the ethics of care. I still hold others in regard, but my family, friends, myself, and even my pets come before others in what I'm morally responsible for.