Subject: Re: View with Internet Explorer
Posted by BlueThen on Tue, 17 Feb 2009 21:36:21 GMT

Saberhawk wrote on Sun, 15 February 2009 06:14BlueThen wrote on Sun, 15 February 2009 00:12cheesesoda wrote on Sat, 14 February 2009 23:02BlueThen wrote on Sat, 14 February 2009 20:49Looks the same in my IE as it does in chrome. A really pixelated image that says something about "security."

What'd you do to IE to make it not be insecure, then? It's supposed to be just a lame image in GOOD, secure browsers, but in my IE (and as is the intention), it's one of those stupid rickroll pages that moves about the screen.
Have you updated your IE any time recently?

I just tried it with a fully updated IE installation and the malformed image redirected me to a rick-roll page. Not bad, but it can't get particularly harmful because I have UAC on :wink:

I'm using version 8.0.6001.18241 (Or just Beta 2 of version 8). I think they've already came out with a release candidate for version 8 though.

Edit: Updated my IE to the RC1 version... still no bug.