Exactly. It doesn't matter if you spent all day on something, the first skin I ever made was the Dragon Med Tank, and it took me 3 hours. But the reason why people like it isn't because it took me that long, it's because there's a dragon and flames on it in a visually appealing, non-Scrin-like manner, meaning it actually flows. It's like signature art, it needs to flow together otherwise it's pointless. It needs to have flow and structure, it needs to work well, etc, etc. Some people might not like it, some people may, but saying this is your best work is stupid, to me it looks like your worst, no offense.
