Time Warner obviously feels threatened by the internet taking away business from their cable services, and has decided to fuck everyone over as a response. 40GB a month for fifty dollars? What a fucking joke. In today's world with things like online gaming, downloadable/streaming HD content, and other products 40GB is a completely illogical limit to slap on their customers. I'd be willing to bet that they'll lose a lot of business for this decision. I know if my ISP ever tried shit like this, I'd be cancelling my account in seconds. In conclusion, Time Warner can eat a dick.
