It's times like this when I'm very tempted to go build a wok-fi or a cantenna and leech off of the University's ample bandwidth... but, then again, Verizon hasn't tried a download cap.

Yet.

I don't pay $30 a month to get shafted, and they already deliver 2/3 of the bandwidth they advertised, so at any given moment I'm ->one<- changed policy away from dropping my service. I've become very intolerant of not getting my money's worth out of ISPs, cable companies, phone companies, etc. If you can't produce results, you don't deserve to stay in business.
