Xbox360 and Wii.

The Wii is often the center of attention when I have company over, even if the people I have over never played video games before.

And the 360 is good for mainstream gaming and multi-player interaction.

I love them both.

However, the PS3, I think is too much money for what its worth. Sure its cost comes from the quality parts and gadgets it is made with, but it has so many different things in it that I either don't want or wont ever use that I would end up paying money for.

I have my PC, my 360 and my Wii, and I'm happy with them.
