Well, that's completely and utterly false. I had to work with Macs in a class in high school. They lagged, crashed, froze, etc. worse than any PC I've ever owned. Those people you know must not use their Macs for very long or for anything more intensive than web browsing. That said, I don't deny that Windows has its own issues.

I second this.

If you're just going to be using a Mac for web browsing and very basic editing programs, then they're okay. But, since Macs are usually more expensive than PCs, there's really no point in getting a Mac for those reasons when you can get a PC that does the same thing for cheaper.
