you're right: you don't improve over night but you become a tiny bit better every day as long as you work on it. Some things that might help you....

make sure your html works and rather stay with basic functions than trying something fancy thats bugged. Make sure it works on both popular browsers (latest ff and ie7/8). BTW you should have both installed. FF is quite handy for webdesign.

And, if you ask me, hands of flash. There's nothing more annoying than flash sites

About graphics:

- Use a decent tool. Paint.net and gimp are excellent freeware.
  - Don't use gif unless really needed. use png if you need transparency or jpg for decent quality with low image size
  - browse this site for website colour palettes: <http://www.colourlovers.com/palettes> or use adobe kuler to create a nice palette <http://kuler.adobe.com/#themes/rating?time=30>
