

---

Subject: Re: Question for Christians

Posted by cheesesoda on Thu, 04 Jun 2009 19:24:22 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

IAmFenix wrote on Wed, 03 June 2009 20:27cheesesoda wrote on Sun, 10 May 2009

14:24Quote:If Christians believe Jesus died for our "sins" then they should logically believe no one is going to "Hell." If the incredible story must be believed in order to have the necessary effect, then the story thus becomes nothing more than a subtle psychological ploy instead of a debt actually paid. Jesus either died for us or he didn't. The debt was either paid or it wasn't. The rest is nonsense.

So... answer the question, if Jesus died for our sins, why must we believe that he died for our debt to be paid? If someone paid my debt off, I wouldn't HAVE to acknowledge that the debt was paid for that to be true, right? I mean, this especially being so if I don't even know I HAD a debt to begin with.

The "our" is for those in an exclusive club called Christianity.

GG anyone outside, according to my beliefs.

You're just as much of a sinner as the rest of us. Christ's death pays for everyone's sins, present and future from that point. It's what allows people to be Christian.

---