yet it claims to've been inspired directly from the same god, therefore it must supercede christianity in the same way that christianity supercedes judaism. because islam claims that although jesus was an important prophet, mohammed was a more important one who received the "last revelation". it therefore doesn't matter whether it's based on anything christ said.

are you following me? you can't debunk someone else's religion just by pointing out that your own unproven religion doesn't mention it.
