What worries me a tadbit is:

Quote:On a related note, crimson is so scared of this that she disabled most of our private messaging on all her forums (including renegadeforums) and even banned a couple of us from anything that "she owns".

If I used the PM system on your site to advertise n00bstories you would stop me to. Just like we did. Crimson feeling is simple. You are not going to use the bandwidth she pays for to make fail attempts at sabotage. Same went for here as well. It should be noted not a single n00bstories person has been banned as a result of this internal incident.

I didn't look at the link before I removed it but I assume it was the long ass one. I don't have the desire to go into great length. Simply because most people here really could care less.

The simple story breaks down like this. We fucked around at n00bparty on a 4 hour map of failglass to end it. Got a little carried away, yes, but nothing we saw as anything that was a big deal. Especially considering we were at the owners house and she has the right to decided what does and does not go. A mod who was upset about that was also smurfing (on a later map) and being a general jackass. As a result we grieved him back a little. This caused some RAGE and a resignation. We laughed. That resulted in a few others getting mad. So we simply said look. Were sorry you got mad we don't see it as a big deal blah blah blah. They took that apology and spit it in our face and proceeded to make it personal. At that point the RAGEQUITTING, screen shots and the PMing started. We decided the best course of action was to remove anyone who associated with them for the best interests for n00bstories. So we did. Now we have moved on and are operating like normal. Unless you were or currently a Renegade server moderator for n00bstories the situation does not effect you in any way.

I will let this go since so many have already seen it. I don't know if it will stay that way.
