I quite like my Hiper Anubis.... no fancy flashing lights and whatnot, just a solid, well constructed case. One point worth mentioning however is that your DVD drives won't be flush with the front bezel due to it's design, but since they are usually behind the front door thing it's not that big a deal. Power button, reset button and front panel audio / usb is on the top of the case so you don't need to open the door to get to them. No front FireWire though... although I have yet to find any device which uses that so I don't really care about it and my mobo has a FW port at the back anyway.