does carfax even show how much work a dealer does on the car? or does it only show what has been reported by the police and insurance in regards to the car.

cause lets say the cars engine is toast, and you bring it to the dealer and get engine rebuilt. if all carfax is showing is insurance data like accidents well your car may have never been in one but now it has a rebuilt engine in it...

btw nikki, that pontiac is definetly a beast, but its fuel milage reflects that.

again you compare the milage to hp ration on that pontiac to say the nissan altima 3.5L v6 which now gets 270hp i believe and you will be amazed at the difference.

and like i said before i didnt mention domestics because of poor resale value.

however goodonedriver if you are 100% sure you will keep this car for atleast 8 years then really there is not going to be much of a difference in 8-10 years on the price of the altima vs the G8 cause they will both be under 5k, thats my guess anyways.
