CarProof is better than CarFax

2) Stay away from anything GM imo

The Camry is a nice car, but not really in the same price range as the civic. The corolla would be in the same range as the civic where as the accord would be up with the camry. You can't go wrong with a civic if you're looking for something smaller with good mileage, and a new one would probably last you 12+ years... same with any asian car these days though gm are great cars , chevys rock.

yea my grampa has gm but its like 12 mpg on street and like 18 on highway i dont know much about checy and yea german cars are tight japan cars are too im not big fan of american though
