Sorry, but that is wishful thinking. I think you'll have your eyes opened more when you take Business Law 101 in college. Then you'll realize how dumb all these posts are.

k, inform me, if the title of the forums goes under the name Official renegade forums, it should mean that any community with good intentions should be able to come here and share indiscriminately as long as they don't post private information and follow the other rules. wouldnt that be considered a form of fraud if its advertised as the official forum but some people that haven't broken the rules are getting discriminated against?

and sorry, my Business Law 101 is a little foggy, took it in fall of 06

I do agree with everything except the "fraud" part which I believe to be an overstatement

There is no crime in calling a forum "official" when there is no alternative. The official is merely just an advertising gimmick and nothing more. No where on these forums does any moderator, or the owner, act as if they are representing EA directly. Until I see that, then I think the accusations against these forums are still invalid.

I don't quite understand why people are trying to extort, and manipulate, Crimson in trying to get what they want. Your rights to advertise or even post on here is out of the sole courtesy of Crimson since she owns it.
