There is no crime in calling a forum "official" when there is no alternative. The official is merely just an advertising gimmick and nothing more. No where on these forums does any moderator, or the owner, act as if they are representing EA directly. Until I see that, then I think the accusations against these forums are still invalid.

I don't quite understand why people are trying to extort, and manipulate, Crimson in trying to get what they want. Your rights to advertise or even post on here is out of the sole courtesy of Crimson since she owns it.

I don't think this has anything much to do with EA. Instead, it's more that this forum is generally for the entire Renegade community and people would come in here thinking all interests should be represented. We can't exactly blame them for having that reasonable expectation. *shrugs*

Agreed. We are still at the mercy of Crimson since she owns it. I think she has been more than fair to a lot of people who have used this forum. Just go through all the threads/posts and you will find people who probably should be removed from these forums but are not.
