It has been the precedent on these forums to identify any individual who cheated* and post links to the evidence.

This has been the case since these forums started, and has been going on, normally in the server owners subofurm for ages.

In the occasional case where someone decides to bust themselves cheating*, the forum populace has normally responded in this fashion, given that St0rm were obviously not aware of his previous cheating*, I decided to post a link to that topic, as I imagined a St0rm community member would check this topic, given as it has their community's name in the title and is (hopfully) therefore endorsed by them. In short, I was making them aware of what the person who posted something endorsed by them had done.

(* Yes, I've no solid proof that he actually used cough online, but the evidence isn't exactly on his side - having said that, I helped a moderator in a community I was involved with make a tutorial on testing suspected cheaters (way back before RG became commonplace) - thus, there are screenshots of me cheating in certain private subforums... I guess it's down to who you beleive)
