Posted by Krazyfoxx on Sun, 17 Aug 2003 19:46:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

One thing to consider is software (mainly operating system). If you don't already have an OS and all the other basic software you'll need (the stuff you get with a premade system), then by the time you buy it all you may end up spending close to what you would have if you'd bought premade to begin with. Personally I'd build it myself, but I've already got all the software I need. If that's the case with you then you should consider building, but like several people have already said, if you've never done it get help.