Ethenal wrote on Thu, 01 October 2009 18:30 You say you're looking to get a car soon? Well, you're looking for a car, but you're not a car enthusiast (since you have no idea what a Z28 is), therefore you definitely won't be looking for this car. The Z28 is a Camaro SS on steroids. It'll probably burn more gas in a day than most of your prospective cars will in a week.

Believe me, it's not for you. This is simply GM proving they're not going to simply cater to the more faint-hearted.

I'll make a conjecture here that the point of this thread is that the Government is actually allowing GM to build a mega-gas guzzler.

Thanks for the reply, Ethenal. And I agree - Gas mileage will be a big factor in my decision, and I'm perfectly willing to sacrifice looks and comfort for less gas stops.
