This depends on the server public. We have noticed a vast increase since school / work started again, during our main playing hours, as people get back to their usual habits (play a game of Ren after work or school, to relax).

Our core players tended to be younger players. School/College and me personally having started a new job etc has caused alot of people not to have the same time to put into keeping a "new" renegade server going when player counts dip.

All servers out there arent getting the same kind of player counts as consistent as they were like a year ago and that is to be expected.
