Exactly. It isn't in the case of this topic... so why bring it up? He is asking a seriously honorable question, there is no need to spit in his face.

My Uncle went into the middle east. He didn't join the army, but rather he joined a reconstruction company and worked as a foreman. He was running some of those night convoys a few years ago. (You know, the ones that all those roadside bombings and stuff occurred) He was never in an attacked convoy, but he was doing the same jobs that the attacked ones were doing.

However, he was only in a construction company. He still had to wear a rifle and stuff, but he wasn't necessarily part of the military. I helped him do some research on the company he worked for, but that's really about it.

If you're looking to join the core, however, I don't really know anyone who can help you.
