I don't know about America, but in all the news papers and other media such as the news, magazine, radio etc, in Britain, we're bombarded with information about home-grown terrorists. People that have converted to Islam, or young Muslims that have been born in this country, and yet still been recruited and gone to terrorist training camps. Only the other day there was a whole page dedicated to how Mohammed is now the Second most popular name to give a new born child in this country...

Topics like that are common, hearing about some Muslims protesting the soldier marches and calling them baby killers...

Info about the illegal immigrants flooding in.

Honestly, it's a daily event.

Yet, they wonder why so many people voted for the BNP. It's totally unacceptable for me to be worried about Muslims and fear they are terrorists, yet I was 150 feet away from when they fuckers blew up a Train at Liverpool street station.

The media in my country give a very mixed message, it's confusing. It's like they try to make you think 'those darn Muslim fuckers', yet if you do say that, you're a bad person.
