Safari might be fast and based off the same layout engine, but using MacOS X widgets and font rendering under Windows is retarded.

I've never used it under Windows - I doubt it's as useful (not being able to take advantage of "Preview", widgets) and it's a bit slower.

What I miss in both Chrome and Safari is the universal mouse scroll...I used to literally abuse that feature in Firefox.

is universal mouse scroll the one you use by clicking your middle mousebutton? if it is, I can confirm that it is amazingly awesomely important.
