Emmerich never has, and never will make a good movie. He's a "creative" writer (that doesn't mean good), but he is an absolutely terrible director. What he's good at is making half-assed movies with a lot of explosions, explosions make good trailers, good trailers make for big opening weekends. Then after that those movies fall back down into the gutter to forever be forgotten, thankfully.

Stargate is open to interpretation. The idea was good, but thank god he didn't have anything to do with the show.
