I don't remember seeing this thread last year... anyway, since Caveman already bumped it...

I did something similar earlier this year, I took a load of parts I had sat in a cupboard collecting dust and, along with a case I purchased to put them in and some extra RAM, build myself a small server PC to sit in a corner and run anything I could think of to put on it, all for less than £40 in total. Now its running Server 2008 with Active Directory, IIS7, svnserve and a load of other stuff. It's also a handy backup target for all my other PC's...

Just goes to show what you can do with old stuff thats lying around with no purpose...
