I actually forgot about this bug, but from time to time, there'll be a bug where aircraft will appear to be somewhere they're actually not, and appear to be circling around and around. Shooting at them causes damage still if I recall correctly, and it might even apply to the vehicle regardless of where it is (so it can be a fairly serious bug).

I don't know if it happens that much with normal Renegade (I haven't played flying maps in awhile), but I definitely know it happens with mods.

The only way to get the aircraft to stop appearing to be this way is to find wherever the aircraft really is, as far as I know.
