However, I wouldn't want to put myself in the situation where I had to rely on that argument, because everyone else is either too scared to say how it really is, or there thick as shit.

But you know if you said it at work you would end up in-front of a disciplinary board, and you'd be totally fucked. It's not right, but you know that's how it is these days. Political correctness gone mad!

Call me a coward if you like, but I would not test the argument when my job was on the line, I have a family to support. This guy who sent that email should of had a bit more of a clue about the way of the world, however wrong it is...

Yeah, I guess this is why we have the internet, eh? Good place to share what people really think.

I really wish that you COULD speak out publically, though. America especially- aren't we supposed to have a special piece of paper that let's us do so?

I just wish that people WOULD speak out about this sort of thing. It's never going to get better by ignoring it- so why DO we ignore it?
