Burger King > McDonald's... There is no competition there anymore tbh.

The only thing McD's has over them is about a 20:1 ratio. Someone should make a Xzibit poster about a McD's in a McD's...

McD's used to have a double cheese burger, medium fries, and a 42oz drink on their $1 menu...

Now they have a "McDouble" burger which has 2 patties and only 1 slice of cheese... what kinda fucking retardation is that, whoever came up with that idea should have been fired, but I bet they got a raise for saving those cheap fucks more money.

The small fry is now on the $1, but that is just like 10 fries... And the 42oz drink is now maybe $1.50'ish, and I think the medium drink is still over a $1. I can't remember prices anymore, I only eat there when I am on my way to work and desperate for breakfast.

Burger King's burgers are not the best, but they are easily 10 times better than that crap McD's calls meat.

The fries are about a tie between them, but if I had to pick I would say BK's are better.

Wendy's fries are normally like raw potatoes dipped in grease till barely warm, then they pour half a shaker of salt on them.

Their Burgers are decent though.

Taco Bell is awesome. I only eat their bean burritos w/o onions, chili cheese burritos, and the occasional chicken quesadilla... but I could eat there breakfast lunch and dinner for weeks and only get sick of the gas.

Hardee's > all (in this part of America). They are obviously a lil more expensive, but when you take a bite of that real angus beef thick burger, and then reach for a couple of curly fries... you will know why you paid the extra money.

Their burgers are so thick and filling I don't even bother getting a double.

Sonic has some pretty greasy burgers, but they are still good for change sometimes. Their fries are nothing special, but their tatter tots, cheddar bites, or mozzarella sticks are very nice replacements.
