I've typed and deleted about five different rants about how stupid it is to give "The Commander" a spouse as a supporting character. You're the Hand-of-fucking-God, not a family man. If you want to give an RTS a story with an emotional impact, drop a goddamn nuke on something. Kill off the CO. Kidnap the cute briefing chick or the Cool New Tech Guy. Unless the character in question is going to feature heavily in the hows and whys of the game world (read that: blowing shit up in fun new ways, and teaching me about how to do same), they need to have a more global impact than "honey, please make sure you're home for supper." There just aren't any words for how mindfuckingly stupid this really is.
