It's sad to see is happen, and even worse are people actively contributing to the demise, despite knowing their actions are a contributing factor.

I disagree.

A post is a post is a post. Regardless of what it says it still contributes to a discussion.

As long as people keep posting, the forum wont die.

There's a difference between a post that has value, and a post that has no value. A post with no value does not positively contribute, infact it has the opposite effect.

Who cares if the forum is still technically active, if the only activity is the kind of crap you see in the spam forum?
