
Subject: Re: Open letter to the trolls

Posted by R315r4z0r on Wed, 14 Apr 2010 00:06:51 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Zeratul wrote on Tue, 13 April 2010 19:50 to whoever (im to annoyed at my internet to find it again) said that a valueless troll post is still value to the conversation... such posts make the site less desireable and then the entire site becomes nothing but retards who refuse to stop posting... this is the equivelent of a dead site... goztow and other moderators and the admins keep this from happening therefore goztow is correct.

and if he does not succeed it still made the site last much longer edit:sorry for grammer and sentence structure and wording errors im a little to annoyed to care atm hopefully you get the jest of what im saying

If you find that a thread has lost its conversational value, then you are free to stop posting in it.

But if someone can somehow relate it to something else and continue the conversation, whether it's through a stupid comment or picture, then what grounds do you have to stop them? If you don't like the conversation, post in another thread or don't post at all.

The point of a forum is to have conversations. As long as they don't totally spit in the face of the forum's rules, it really shouldn't make a difference how the conversations unfold.
