There already exists a password field for direct connectors, beit a password to enter the server. Surely it should be fairly easy to have the server use this field as pass for the nickname when the server is set to be public?

You'd still need to have a central database to compare it to, of course.