I would feel like I betrayed myself if I voted for them.

Immigration is bad in this country, but it's not worth wasting a vote on the BNP for just One issue trying to get the subject more stern attention.

Besides, I believe any amount of votes they get would be ignored by the other parties (for various reasons), but they may take note of votes for UKIP.
Oh, obviously. But it'd still be hilarious to see an obviously racist party even get more than 3 votes.

On a serious note though, I hope more parties come into play for England. Maybe America would follow suit. It'd be nice to not have the same old two important parties, and every other party is just "a third party"
