You should write your media to abstain from using the term 'hung parliament' because it implies that nothing gets done.

Brown seems intent on courting the Lib Dems, and that means that they can play the 'electoral reform' card. It's not just limited to Brown; Cameron will need their help as he'll inevitably have to cut services and raise taxes, or for when he introduces initiatives that will cause England to tangle with the EU.

I do hope Cameron will have a slight change of heart and co-operate with the EU, if only on the subject of the Canadian/European Free Trade Talks. If he's a good conservative, he'll realize how beneficial it'll be for his country to have near unfettered access to ours(and America, by proxy of NAFTA).
