firstly, i didn't say banning 0x90 from the forum would undo the extraordinary amount of damage he has done to this game, especially the competitive sector of it. nor did i say it would diminish the number of the cheaters in the game. but if you're going to take this ridiculous line of reasoning, then let's be consistent. if the damage is already done, there's no need to dish out a penalty, right?

Look again at the subject of this thread. The thread is asking if 0x90 should be banned from the forums for cheating in Renegade. It's not about you or what you said specifically, it's about his actions in the game and how punishment should or should not carry over onto the forums. You may have not said anything specifically saying that banning a cheater from the forums is going to stop them cheating in Renegade, but that is what this thread is about and you obviously are for him leaving the forum.

As for penalty, there should be none. Not because the damage is done but because he has done nothing wrong. I am completely sick and tired of people being labeled for things they do somewhere else. A cheater might cheat in Renegade, but the forum is a totally different place. Sure it might discuss the game and people might carry over their feelings onto the forum, but the fact remains that he has not broken any forum rules.

Banning from the forums would be nothing but a demonstration of power abuse.

Spoony wrote on Thu, 13 May 2010 14:58secondly it makes me sick to see more people defend him than flame him (because he's apparently nice and helpful to people on the forum... i'm sorry, but after the unbelievable amount of damage he's done to the players he's talking to, this is a mark of his dishonesty rather than his helpfulness, and it's sad to see how many people fall for it), and it makes me even sicker to see people take a brave stand against those of us who give him a piece of our mind.

That's your opinion but it doesn't make you right. I have never encountered him in Renegade nor do I know what 'help' he apparently gives, so what grounds do I have to hold him in contempt? You suffered from what he did and therefore you have a right to be angry with him. But like I said, just because you're angry doesn't make it right to ban him from the forum.

Spoony wrote on Thu, 13 May 2010 14:58thirdly, i've yet to hear a good reason to repudiate what i said in the earlier thread.

Which thread do you mean?
